The 2015 Paleontology Field School was extremely successful. This year's crew set a record for field accessioned fossil specimens (over 500), assisted with quarrying (a first for the field course), and helped to determine the boundaries and potential of one of the most important Colorado State University field localities. Dr. LaBelle's Center for Mountain and Plains Archaeology (CMPA) had an active summer, conducting archaeological research in a variety of ecosystems in central and northern Colorado. The crew was composed of Hallie Meeker, Aaron Whittenburg, Michelle Dinkel, and Kelton Meyer, with Julia Kenyon joining the crew later in the summer. MORE

Kalli Perrine was one of three Colorado State University Department of Anthropology students to attend the 2015 Himalayan Health Exchange. The Himalayan Health Exchange (HHE) provides a 7-day preventive health camp using a practical approach to the study of India, Tibet and the Himalayan culture.
