

CALL FOR PROPOSALS

WOMEN'S STUDIES TEACHING, CURRICULUM, AND SCHOLARSHIP PROJECT Spring 2014

The Women's Studies Project on Teaching, Curriculum and Scholarship began in 1984 as a result of a grant written by Dr. Patsy Boyer, an early proponent of Women's Studies at Colorado State University from the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures. The Curriculum Project is on-going and expands across the curriculum to include participants from the colleges of veterinary medicine & biomedical sciences, natural science, engineering, natural resources, business, applied human sciences, agricultural sciences, and the liberal arts. To date, the Program has had 111 faculty participants representing 31 departments in all eight colleges.

The Women's Studies Curriculum Project's Call for Proposal solicits faculty facilitators to fulfill the mission of providing professional development for Women's studies Curriculum and/or Research. Project facilitators, selected from the Women's Studies affiliated faculty and/or past participants, meet with a group of participants for a minimum of eight times during the semester. Facilitators receive a modest stipend as well administrative and operating support from the CWSGR. Participants are awarded a $500 stipend and their completion of the project must have clear outcomes including, but not limited to, the redesign of Women's Studies course, the development of a new Women's Studies course, increased knowledge of pedagogical practices and Women's Studies methodologies, or new research in areas previously unexplored.

Interested facilitators must submit a proposal a maximum of two pages on October 22th by 4 pm. Proposals that include sexuality studies, gender and the sciences, and Queer studies are especially welcomed. Notification of the project award will be made by December 1, 2014.
